Jurnal Keperawatan Indonesia (JKI, or Nursing Journal of Indonesia) is the oldest and most respected broad-based nursing journal in Indonesia. The journal was established in 1997, and as the name suggests, JKI has become a pioneer in the publication of nursing journals in Indonesia. Its presence has been invaluable to the vast growth of the nursing profession in the country and to the development of nursing and health in general. In conjunction with this journey, the journal not only covers issues surrounding nursing in Indonesia, but also any topics that are relevant to health nationally and internationally, especially those concerning low-middle income countries in the world. This journal has been published by Universitas Indonesia, managed by Faculty of Nursing, Universitas Indonesia.

Aims and Scope

JKI aims to promote excellence in nursing and healthcare research and practice by disseminating evidence-based, peer-reviewed clinical information, and original research. This journal provides a forum for discussing critical and contemporary professional issues, maintaining strict adherence to scientific integrity standards, and promoting nursing perspectives to the healthcare community and the general public. The scope of this journal is advancing and specialize in nursing research and education with encompass fields such as pediatric nursing, maternity nursing, gerontological nursing, community health nursing, management and health informatics nursing, palliative care nursing, psychiatric nursing, medical-surgical nursing, and transcultural nursing.

The journal accepts original research articles, synthesized literature, best practice reports or case reports, and methodology article that use the quantitative, qualitative, or mixed-method approach. JKI adheres to journalistic standards that require transparency of real and potential conflicts of interest that authors and editors may have. It follows publishing standards set by the International Committee of Medical Journal Editors (ICMJE), the World Association of Medical Editors (WAME), and the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE).
